

President Donald Trump is fast tracking a Dirty Energy Agenda that is putting our country at grave risk. Hurricanes Harvey and Irma have put an exclamation point on the realities of how harmful climate change will be for our present and future communities if we do not swiftly transition from coal, oil, and fracked gas to a clean energy path. The damage will be to human life and safety, to our local and national economies, to businesses large and small, and to our healthy environments necessary to sustain food, air, water, and flood protection for present and future generations.

FERC is set to reconvene on September 20th with Trump's Senate-approved commissioners Robert Powelson and Neil Chatterjee eager to use their newly minted rubber stamps.

All of this is happening as the Senate and House are moving bills that would expand FERC's authority. One of the House bills actually strips the President of the border crossing authority used to stop Keystone XL and gives it to FERC. The worst of the bills is the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Act of 2017, S. 1460. It expands FERC's authority by requiring other permitting agencies to "give deference" to FERC and it limits FERC's review of LNG facilities to 45 days.

Representatives from communities impacted by FERC's abuses of law and power are convening in Washington, DC on September 20, 2017 to protest the restoration of a quorum at FERC, show their opposition to Trump's Dirty Energy Agenda and lobby Congress.
