d. Requirements for entry:

- The subject of the paper submitted must be one of the following topics:

1. Companion animals have long been recognized by the law as personal property. When an owner brings suit for loss of a pet or injury to a pet, the damages are calculated under property principles, which may cap recovery at fair market value. The courts and/or legislatures of several states have been willing to accept claims requesting damages beyond a pet's market value, including for reasonable and necessary veterinary costs that are above market value and for a pet's "actual value" which can include economic factors besides market value. A few states have allowed emotion-based claims when a pet is maliciously injured or killed, but nearly all states have rejected claims for emotional distress, pain and suffering, sentimental value, loss of companionship and other non-economic damages in negligence claims involving harm to pets. Discuss the causes of action and types of damages above with relation to companion animals. What types of situations would give rise to lawsuits over animal injuries? What are the benefits and disadvantages of allowing expanded liability in these situations? What would be the net impact on pet welfare? All points of view are welcome.

OR

2. Pet custody has become a highly dynamic area of the law. Under the traditional view, which is reflected in most state laws, companion animals are considered personal property. In recent years, some courts have started changing how they handle pet custody in family law cases, such as divorce. When a couple separates, the pet is traditionally allocated to one of its owners. It may be determinative if the pet was a gift from one of the owners to the other. In recent years, courts have been experimenting with different types of solutions, including split custody and assessing the best interests of the pet. Custody issues also arise with law enforcement, when the police or animal control take custody of a pet that has been severely neglected and is in need of immediate medical attention. Comparable issues arise when a local shelter takes custody of a pet found in the street. Discuss the relevant law surrounding pet custody, the potential limits on ownership interests in pets, the pros and cons and any potential future impacts of changing the law. All points of view are welcome.

- The paper must be formatted as follows:

- * Double-spaced, 8 ½ x 11 inch sized papers with one-inch margins
- * Minimum of 8 pages and maximum of 15 pages in length
- * Typed in 12 point Times New Roman font
- * Single-spaced footnotes (not endnotes) typed in 10 point Times New Roman font
- * Proper citation format.

- The paper submitted must not be derogatory, offensive, threatening, defamatory, disparaging, libelous or contain any content that is inappropriate, indecent, sexual, profane, tortious, slanderous, discriminatory in any way or that promotes hatred or harm against any group or person, or otherwise does not comply with the topics and spirit of the Contest.

- The paper submitted must not contain material that violates, misappropriates or infringes upon any law or regulation or the rights of any third party including, but not limited to, any copyright, trademark or any rights of publicity or privacy, or any other intellectual property or proprietary rights.

e. Entries that do not comply with all of these requirements will not be accepted.

6. Judging Criteria

Entries will be judged by members of the legal and public policy professions with experience in laws impacting companion animals. The following factors will be considered: demonstrated knowledge of the topic, application of legal principles, effective use of proper authorities, strength of logic and reasoning, originality, and conclusions of future impact. In addition, consideration will be given to technical aspects such as: organization, citations, proper format, and overall clarity.

The decisions of the judges are final.

7. License to Use Entries

By entering the Contest, all entrants grant an irrevocable, unconditional, perpetual, worldwide, non-exclusive license to Sponsor and their respective licensees to reproduce, store, copy, transmit, publish, post, broadcast, distribute, display and create derivative works of and/or otherwise use (without limitation as to when or to the number of times used) each element of an entrants' entry (including, but not limited to, the paper submitted) in connection with the Contest, the promotion of the Contest, and in any other manner at the discretion of the Sponsor in any media now or hereafter known.
